At a recent meeting of Lancaster county farmers, the following statement was made, viz:
"In experiments made by Sir John Bennet Lawes and Dr. J. H. Gilbert, in England, a plot of ground where commercial Fertilizers have been used for forty successive years, the wheat crop is as great now as when the experiments began, and better than a similar plot that received stable manure alone for the same period."
The most reliable Commercial Fertilizers are RAW BONE MANURES!

which is Scrofulous Disease of the Lungs, is promptly and certainly arrested and cured by this God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all
CHRONIC DISEASES OF THE

SELECT STORY.

MILLY'S COMFORTER.

A COMMONPLACE STORY.

It was woven of fleecy, crinkly zephyr, and was red, but that vivid scarlet we sometimes see in the flash of a bird's wing or the glow of a brilliant sunset. Ruskin says this is the color of life, and though Milly had not heard this, she felt it every time she wound the gay thing about her slender throat and tossed its tasseled ends coquetishly over her shoulder.

One short, raw, wintry afternoon Milly was hastening home from school, well wraped in its foils, when her brisk pace was arrested by a heavy sob, and, looking around, she saw a sight rather rare on those quiet, aristocratic streets—a little boy, thinly and raggedly clothed, sitting on the curbing, his head bent forlornly on a pile of papers in his lap, which he was evidently making damper than usual with his tears. Milly looked at him pitifully, walked on a pace or two, hesitated, glanced back and then stepped resolutely toward him and tapped his shoulder.

"What's the matter?" she asked, quietly; "are you sick or hurt?"

He raised his head and turned upon her a surprised, woebegone face, which, however, in spite of tears and dirty streaks, was far from unattractive.

"I—can't—sell—my—papers," he sobbed, brokenly.

"Of course not, up here," said Milly, in brisk, business-like tones. You don't see anybody on these streets but women and children, and they don't want papers. You ought to go down town where the stores are; then, if you'll wait until 6 o'clock the gentlemen will be going home to dinner, and they'll take them fast enough."

"But they hustle me about so, and I'm awful cold and hungry," he moaned.

"Poor child!" Milly's tones softened. "I expect they do, but you must hustle back, and stand your own ground. Guess you never sold papers before, did you?"

"No'm,' he returned, gazing at her as though she was an oracle; "I never had to before. Tom takes care of me. He's my big brother and a sailor. We've got a nice little room that he pays the rent, and when he goes off on long v'iges, I eat with the Jenkinses across the entry. He pays them, too. Tom's awful good, but he come home sick this time, and the money's most gone. I thought I could get some more selling papers; but I have spent all Tom's fifty cents and I haven't made a thing!"

He sighed dolefully again, while the sudden memory of a dime saved for taffy in the corner of her handkerchief made Milly's face radiant as she dropped it into his dirty paw.

"No,no," she laughed, as he handed out a paper; "I don't want any—wouldn't read it for a dollar; and papa buys his down town—if you could find him now! He takes the brown cars near the common, a big man with a fur overcoat, and moustache, and a sealskin cap, and eyes that twinkle; and like as not he'll throw you a quarter, and say: 'Never mind the change!' It's just like him—and here, this'll keep you warm."

With a quick movement the red comforter was transferred from Milly's neck to his, and before he could speak she had nodded a gay good-by and disappeared around the corner.

He looked after her a long minute, then down at the soft scarlet wrap, and gathering himself up with new resolution, turned and walked away, burying his chin in its fleecy folds with a delicious sense of returning warmth and comfort.

Two hours later a superb-looking gentleman, striding rapidly toward his car—a smile in his eyes as he thought of the box of French bon-bons in his pocket ready for Milly's searching fingers—felt a gentle pull at his sleeve and such a pleading "Oh, please, sir, buy a copy—please do!" that he involuntarily stopped.

It was a little fellow who held them eagerly forward with a smiling, tear-streaked face, and a vivid bit of scarlet about his throat that made the owner think of Milly, so he said, in his own brisk way:

"All right! Got a Transcript? That's it! Here—never mind the change; there's my car; and with a rush forward he had swung himself lightly aboard, leaving a silver quarter in the boy's hand, exactly, as Milly had prophesied.

"I knowed it!" muttered the child, gazing after him with shining eyes; "I knowed 'twas her pa!" But an impatient "paper boy" brought him to his senses, and in a short time, with arms empty, but heart and pocket full, he rushed for his brother, cold and hunger alike forgotten.

"I done it, Tom! I sold every one. Here's the money," and quite a shower of coppers and nickles, to say nothing of the silver dime and quarter, rattled out upon the bed.

Tom's wan face brightened at the sight.

"Why you little clipper," he cried, gayly, "who'd a thought it! Come, reel off your yarn, quick, and lets have grub. I'm as hungry as a dolphin."

"Well, 'twas all the little lady's doin's, you see," began Jimmy, and told the story you already know, displaying the red comforter as triumphantly as a conquerer displays his trophies.

At that very moment Milly sat munching a bonbon upon the arm of her father's easy chair before the grate, while he, lying back luxuriously in dressing gown and slippers, with the Transcript across his knees, looking teasingly into her face.

"Whom did I buy my paper of? Bless the child! What curiosity! How can I tell now, I'd like to know? Let's see, though—him! He was a little, and pathetic, and dirty, with big blue eyes, and a beautiful red comforter much like yours."

He glanced laughingly at his wife here, for this comforter was one of those things they liked to joke about in private; but Milly jumped up and down with pleasure.

"It was—oh, papa, it was him! He really, really knew you! Oh, how perfectly splendid!" and all in a breath she told the pleasant story of the afternoon, while her father's face grew tender, and the glances exchanged with his wife were so full of love and happiness that neither could be content until she had perched upon the other arm, while the happy man enfolded them both in what he merrily called a "triple hug."

Weeks slipped by, while Jimmy continuing to sell papers, with varying but ever increasing success, and Tom rapidly regained health and strength, to finally ship again as deck hand on board a great vessel which was to carry grain to Southern France, and return (God willing) loaded with the rich wines and the luscious fruits of that favored country.

"You can earn enough money to pay the rent," said his brother, as they talked it all over, "and Mother Jenkins says you shall share her bite and sup so long as they last, and I'll pay when we drop anchor in the bay again. There, there, boy, keep up a good heart; it won't be long, you know."

But Jimmy cried all night; it was so lonesome with Tom gone. Then a bright thought checked the tears and he slept peacefully. Next morning the thought returned, and, acting upon it, he crept out of bed, took the precious red comforter from his little shelf, and folding it with a loving touch, laid it in Tom's sea chest which, packed, but not yet corded, stood by the bed.

"It's all I've got to give him," thought Jimmy, sadly, "and it'll keep him warm when he stands watch these cold nights."

So, unknown to Tom, the long, red length of comfort went with him, to help the battle against cold and storm, while Jimmy was left to fight the world and stormier fate at home.

Another great vessel, very different from the clumsy concern Tom sailed in, left the bay a week later—a steamship with flying pennons, decks gay with people, and enough shiny wood gildings and mirrors to have furnished a dozen houses; an ocean passenger steamer bound for Havre, freighted with a thousand souls, and the ten thousand things necessary to their comfort. Upon its decks stoood Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth and Milly. They were going to France for the lady's health, while Milly was to have an outing and learn from nature's great school for a while.

About three days out the weather became very unpleasant; rain and chilling fog vied with tempestuous wind and storm to delay their course, but the luxurious ship—a world in itself—laughed at old ocean's moods, and plowed steadily onward, quite undaunted. It was, however, far worse for draught vessels, often overloaded and ill managed, and dependent upon wind and tide for their speed and safety. But Milly never thought of these, as, glorying in her perfect immunity from seasickness, she roamed the great steamer fore and aft, making friends with passengers and crew, and asking questions which often made the latter scratch their heads in perplexity.

They were about a week out and far from either shore; the fog had lifted, and a brilliant morning sun lighted the broad, comparatively smooth expanse of sea. The Captain, glass in hand, was slowly scanning the horizon, and Milly, close by, with no lens but those of her keen young eyes, scanned it with equal dignity and care. About southwest his glass came to a sudden standstill, then he took it from his eyes and was eagerly rubbing his lenses, when the watch suddenly sang out, "Sail ho!"

"Where away?" cried the Captain, readjusting his glass.

"To leeward," came the prompt reply, and in a moment the two were consulting in eager tones.

Soon after the steady plunging of the engines grew slower and slower, then almost ceased; gentlemen passengers began to climb to elevated places and gaze through their own glasses, and she heard one say:

"Yes, it's an open boat, evidently a small one, too. See! they are going to the rescue. It's well the fog lifted when it did, or we would never have sighted them in the world."

The excitement increased, for every incident becomes an event in the monotony of sea life, and especially everything that speaks of danger and shipwreck.

Milly watched them lower away the boat and man it, the officer descending last of all and giving orders, which caused each upraised oar to drop as if run by machinery, sending the little craft cutting swiftly through the waves, then, throwing her glance beyond it, for the first time she saw a speck against the sky—a black speck with a fiery tip, apparently—could that be the lost boat? Supported on the taffrail by her father's arm, she could now see the fiery tip was really a flag or pennon floating upon the masthead, and at last could make out the shape of the boat, and even the few figures within it. Then the ship's boat reached it; the figures bobbed about, mixing themselves indistinguishably, after which the life-saving craft put about and came rapidly shipward, towing the others in its wake. A nearer view showed Milly five rescued men and one boy, lying at full length, apparently dead; a still nearer view (could it be possible?) discovered that gay peunon to be her own red comforter, tassels and all streaming in the breeze.

Speechless she turned to her father; but notwithstanding, he excitedly lifted her down and ran with the crowd to see the rescued men helped aboard.

Meanwhile, down the cabin gangway fled Milly and burst in upon the astonished ladies there with a cry:

"Mamma, mamma! what do you think? They've saved them, and my comforter was the flag!"

"Milly, my child!" cried the mother, springing to her feet. "Good heavens! has this excitement driven her mad?"

But, persisting that she was still sane, Milly dragged her mother deckward to see for herself.

Yes, there was no mistaking it—there, in its vivid warmth of color, fluttered the comforter; a little sea stained, to be sure, but unmistakably the same.

"Oh, mamma, I see it all!" cried Milly suddenly. "I see it all! I see it all! The boy said his brother was a sailor—that boy in the boat must be he! Do—do go and ask the Captain if he is alive, and if we may see him."

"Yes, yes, dear, when papa comes. Now you must sit down, for you are trembling all over."

In less than an hour word was brought by the steward that all the rescued men were conscious, and the ladies might talk with them if they chose; so, accompanied by Mr. Wentworth, they went below.

"They've had a dreadful time, poor fellows!" exclaimed the steward, as he guided them into the hitherto unknown depths. "Out four days in that leaky boat. Their vessel foundered Monday night. They took to the boats with what little provision they could snatch, but the wind and sea drove them apart, and when daylight came the fog was so heavy they couldn't take their bearings. Their provisions—what weren't spoiled by salt water—gave out on Wednesday morning, and they've lived on faith ever since. It nearly finished that poor boy. He isn't over strong, I guess, and pretty young for such service—not over 20, I'll wager. This way ladies."

And they stood beside a bunk, where lay a ghastly young fellow, with great blue eyes, so like Jimmy's that Milly could no longer doubt the relationship, but she had been already convinced.

"He's the one, papa—he's Tom!" she whispered, excitedly. "Speak to him."

He answered their questions in a weak, languid tone; but when it become clear that Milly was the young girl who had given his little brother the scarf, he had risen eagerly upon his elbow, while a big tear rolled down his face.

"Oh, miss, it brought a blessing—that comforter!" he said, eagerly. "The dear lad slipped it, unbeknowust to me into my chist, and I was a-wearing it in the night we foundered; and when we were lookin' about for signals to hoist, I rigged that up, and, bless God, it's brought us safe here."

Persian Customs.

BRIDAL FORMS IN THE LAND OF THE SHAH.

The seat of honor was given to me, the bride sitting on my right, her elder aunt (her uncle had two wives) on my left. Persians think a great deal of appearance and outward show, and all the ladies were decked in their gaudiest attire, and were blooming in all the fictitious glories of painted woman hood. Fair hair and eyes are not admired by them, but a fair skin and florid complexion are greatly sought after, and call forth the tribute of general admiration. Even when nature has distributed her gifts with no niggard hand they will furbish up the complexion with quantities of rouge and powder until they look like full-blown roses. Many an old woman of hideous forbidding aspect, whose appearance would be invaluable in melodrama, is made up into the bad semblance of a young woman; the furrows Time with his ruthless fingers has traced are filled in with powder, not artistically faced as the European belle—many of whose charms might not bear close overhauling—often sets off her loveliness with artfully-arranged aids to beauty, but laid on in thick layers. Although the bride was very young, having at the most seen sixteen summers, rouge, alas, was no stranger even to her pretty face! Her hair, which was jet black and very long, was plated into a number of tiny tails, the ends of which peeped forth from under the chagat of folded white linen she wore on her head. Nothing can exceed the ugliness or unbecomingness of this head gear; it is merely a square piece of muslin or cotton folded cornerwise, and tightly fastened with a pin or tiny brooch under the chin, with two ends hanging down the back, and the remaining two falling over the breast. Over this again is worn the house veil which envelopes the whole figure; it is a large square or rounded piece of muslin or gay-patterned chintz and is not fastened on but simply kept in its place by the arms. Her voluminous skirt was of white and pink striped satin, hand omely trimmed with gold lace, and reached only half way to the knee; the legs were bare.

Often as many as twenty yards of silk or satin are employed for these skirts, which are gathered into a band at the waist, and are worn over four or fine petticoats very much stiffened. The more a skirt stands out the more fashionable it is. The bodice is a loose sort of jacket of silk or velvet, trimmed with gold lace, the sleeves are long and terminate in a pointed cuff that turns back, reaching nearly to the elbow. This is worn over a calico or linen shirt. Although all dresses agree in their leading features, and the fashions never change in the East as they do in the west, yet they differ to a great extent in detail, and afford a scope for the peculiar taste or fancy of the wearer. The contrast between indoor dress and walking attire is very striking.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Ducks usually bring a higher price in market than hens.

Do not let foul weeds go to seed either in fields or roadsides.

A week of exposure to the hot sun will injure the horse rake, mower and reaper more than a whole season's use.

Throw a little straw under the tomato vines, to keep the fruit clean and ground moist, making much finer fruit and continuing it longer.

If you wish the pigs to grow, feed them all the grass they can eat. Don't turn them loose in the clover field, but cut the grass and throw it over the pen to them.

Be sure that the ground floor in the poultry house is enough higher than the surrounding ground to keep it perfectly dry. Damp floors are very productive of disease.

In buying pigs for breeding stock the best is the cheapest, though it costs a little more money. The reason why breeders justify themselves in saving runts, is because some men are thoughtless enough to buy them at a low price.

All small apples and others defective in form or damaged by worms have their best market on the farm as food for animals. If packed with sound fruit, even in small proportion, they reduce the price of all often to the point of loss.

Bees do not work as well in a hive exposed to the sun. In midday, when very hot, all work on the inside, such as comb-building and storing honey has to be suspended. Sometimes combs melt down, and the brood dies in the heat of the sun.

OPENING THE CAMPAIGN.

A LETTER FROM MR. BUCKALEW. CHAIRMAN HENSEL'S DENIAL OF THE CHARGES OF THE "PRESS."

A very large meeting of the Democracy of Philadelphia was held last Saturday evening in the Academy of Music. Speeches were made by R. E. Monoghan, R. Milton Speer and others. Chairman Hensel read the following letter:

"W U. HENSEL, Esq., Chairman Democratic State Committee.

"DEAR SIR: I shall be unable, by reason of home engagements, to attend your meeting on the 9th instant, in Philadelphia. Were I present, it would afford me great pleasure to urge upon the audience the support of the very excellent and patriotic gentlemen named by the Democratic State Convention for public office, for I am sure that by their election the people can secure to themselves in abundant measure the peaceable fruits of good government and honest rule.

"It is a favorite declaration of side parties and factions that our great parties are not divided upon important questions of principle and policy; that the recurring struggles between them are mere struggles for the possession of power and office. By whomsoever asserted or accepted, this is a gross error, and it is an error to be strongly denied and repelled. We hold, and have always held, that overaction by government is an evil to be guarded against with constant care and vigilance, while our opponents in the great contests of the past have inclined to enlarged government action and to free construction of constitutional power in order to secure it.

"Related to this point is another not to be omitted from mention: On both sides of the Atlantic 'home rule' is a sound rule, and it is one of the enduring and distinctive doctrines of the Democracy of the United States. They have maintained it through good and through evil report and are now more strongly than ever devoted to its defense. It is a doctrine essential to the success of free institutions and to the welfare of nations, but it requires constant support against powerful foes.

"The enforcement of the Constitution of this Commonwealth by appropriate legislation is a subject for grave concern on the part of the people of Pennsylvania. It is one of the distinctive issues of this campaign.

Very truly yours,
C. R. BUCKALEW.

"BLOOMSBURG, October 6, 1886."

After the applause which greeted the name of the writer had subsided, Mr. Hensel said: "I have another and less pleasant duty to perform. A daily paper of this city, the Philadelphia Press, has editorially charged that the Democratic State committee are engaged in making a deal with the Knights of Labor. Considerable sums of money, says the editor, have already been paid to the hired agents of the Knights. For my party, not for myself, I made haste to say that this assertion was an unqualified, unmitigated and malicious lie. And since I caused that statement to be printed in the hospitable columns of self-respecting journals, this editor has neither had the courtesy nor bravery to retract his statement. In this public place I say that editor is an unqualified, unmitigated and malicious liar, and having said this I might fitly leave him to the contempt of decent journalism, and scorn of honest men. He has since printed a pretended dispatch from Clearfield, and he has presumed to say in an editorial on a pretended dispatch, that Mr. Black had said that two-thirds of the labor votes are pledged to him, and that Beaver can't get them away to save his life. I sent a copy of the article to Mr. Black, and he sent me this dispatch: 'The story printed in Press is a pure fabrication from first to last.' That is my speech and I will now make room for abler men."

Degrading American Labor.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY THE PIONEER IN LEGISLATION AGAINST THE WORKINGMEN.

The Beaver platform in Pennsylvania, 1886, says: "We deprecate the nefarious work of importing foreign pauper labor, criminal and contract labor, and the products of criminal and contract labor, and demand the passage of a national law summarily and positively prohibiting such importation under any pretext whatever."

It is a curious fact not generally known, that the first and only law ever passed by Congress expressly authorizing the importation of foreigners under contract to perform labor for a stated time in place of our American workingmen, was put through the two Houses when the Republicans had an overwhelming majority in each; it is true, also, that the record fails to disclose any opposition to that atrocious measure on the part of Republicans in either House. Its champion in the Senate was the Hon John Sherman, of Ohio, and in the House the Hon. E. B. Washburne, of Illinois.

The bill is entitled "An Act to Encourage Immigration." It passed both Houses July 2, 1864, on a conference report signed by Sherman and Anthony on part of the Senate, and by Washburne and Windom on the part of the House, the Democratic conferees refusing to sign, and it was approved by the President July 4, 1864, which was the last of the session.

The managers of the bill exhibited hot impatience to put it through before the close of that session. June 27, on motion of Mr. Sherman "all prior orders" of the Senate were postponed, and the bill was taken up and passed, the ground of haste being as stated by the Ohio Senator, that "wages were very high" in this country, and we needed importation on that account. In the House Thad. Stevens had moved to go into Committee of the Whole on one of the great appropriation bills, but withdrew his motion on Washburne's earnest appeal, and the pauper, alien, contract labor-bill was passed without a word of manly opposition from the Republican side, the Democrats being so few in that House that they could not enforce the demand of Mr. Pendleton, of Ohio, for a call of the yeas and nays.

The bill itself, aside from the outrage it proposed to inflict upon American workingmen, in putting their labor in competition with that of imported aliens, is a prime curiosity. As it appears in the Statutes at large, section 1 authorizes the President to appoint a Commissioner of Immigration, subject to the directions of the Department of State, at a salary of $2,500, with three clerks, &c. The remaining sections, except section 2, provide for a United States emigrant office in New York City, with one Commissioner, who is authorized to make contracts with railroad companies, &c., to carry imported workmen to their destination; for exempting such alien laborers from military service; appropriates $25,000 for carrying the law into effect and specifies the number of clerks to be employed, salaries, tenure of office, &c. The sting is in section 2, which is in the following words:

"All contracts that shall be made by emigrants with the United States in foreign countries, in conformity to regulations that may be established by the said Commissioner, whereby emigrants shall pledge the wages of their labor for a term not exceeding twelve months, to repay the expenses of their emigration, shall be held valid in law, and may be enforced in the courts of the United States, or of the several States and Territories; and such advances, if so stipulated in the contract, and the contract be recorded in the Recorder's office in the county where the emigrant shall settle, shall operate as a lien upon any land thereafter acquired, until liquidated by the emigrant, whether under the homestead law when the title is consummated, or on property otherwise acquired by the emigrant; but nothing herein contained shall be deemed to authorize any contract contravening the Constitution of the United States, or creating in any way the relation of slavery or servitude."

Everybody knows that swarms of aliens have been imported into this country under contract since the passage of that act; that they have worked their appointed time at wages utterly ruinous to American workingmen, and then returned to their squalid homes in Europe. They came with no intention of becoming citizens of the United States. The perpetrators of this grievous outrage against American workingmen find their apology in the Republican law above quoted, and which may be justly styled the pioneer act in legislative assaults on American labor.

In the light of this law there is something like grim irony in the declarations on this subject found in Republican platforms of late years.

A Dog's Horrible Find.

THE DEAD BODY OF A POLISH WOMAN DISCOVERED NEAR HAZLETON.

HAZLETON, Oct. 9.—A most shocking discovery was made in the woods near the Jeddo store this morning by John Bruzunski, a 16 year lad, and Frank Siglin. The two boys' noticing the strange actions of a dog belonging to young Bruzunski's father, proceeded into the woods to ascertain the cause, and to their surprise found the murdered body of young Bruzunski's mother.

The spot where the body was found indicated that a fierce struggle had taken place. There were two deep cuts behind each ear, which had been inflicted by some sharp instrument, and the face was badly scratched. Mrs Bruzunski left her home at Highland on Wednesday evening for G. B. Markle & Co's store at Jeddo. She did not return to her home, and Mr. Bruzunski sent to inquire if she had been there. The clerks in the store had not seen her and her husband was so notified. He immediately instituted a search, but she could not be found until the dog revealed the mystery. The opinion is that the woman was waylaid by unknown persons, knocked down assaulted, and killed. Squire Dobson was notified and empaneled a jury, who, after viewing the body rendered a verdict that death resulted from a blow of some blunt instrument in the hands of one or more persons unknown. The victim was a respectable Polish woman and was the mother of six children.

A Hungarian named J. C. Zulbina, one of the victim's boarders, has been missing since the horrible deed was perpetrated, and he is suspected of having murdered the woman. Zulbina was the only person who could give information about the whereabouts of the woman just before she was missed by her relatives.

Seven of the Chicago Anarchists have been sentenced to be hanged on December 3. The Arbeiter Zeitung, the organ of the Anarchists is fierce, and recently printed the following:

"The first act of the play ended the 20th of August, when the jury, consisting of capitalistic hirelings, declared the defendants guilty. The second act came to an end yesterday, when the puppet in the Judge's chair refused the just demands of the defense and set the day of execution. However many acts are to come? How are they to end? We cannot say.

"Shall we waste words on the partisan conduct of the trial, which violated every idea of right and justice? Shall we speak of witnesses who were terrorized, abused by the police and purchased? Shall we say that the state had not the least proof that our associates had anything to do with the bomb-throwing? What would be the use of it? The money-sack outranked labor in the court. That tells the whole story. No, we will not waste a word upon the monostrosity of this most shocking of all trials, but what we will do is to turn to you, the working, struggling, freedom-hungering proletariat. We call on you to be united and courageous in this bitter struggle, to hate and condemn the existing injustice and tyranny.

"Take heart you men and women of the people. Lay aside all little things—all which can hurt and which are unworthy of our great cause. Shake off the old Adam of petty squabbles and of delay. Be men; be heroines. Think of our convicted associates; think of those great and noble men whose blood has flowed for freedom and the welfare of mankind, and this will give you courage and strength."

The Anarchists will hang as they deserve.

WASHINGTON LETTER

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11, 1886.

This is the busy season in the Departments at Washington. The heads of divisions, the chiefs of bureaus and the Cabinet officers are preparing their annual reports. The President is writing his message. The Governmental history of the year must be epitomized, the balance sheet must be struck off and the chief executive must suggest by way of recommendation, the measures he will sanction, provided they receive the approval of legislation. All the members of the Cabinet except the Secretary of State, have returned. Mr Bayard was shrewd enough to postpone his vacation until autumn and is now resting away from the city during the season which, in Washington, is most trying to the corpus humanis

Extracts from the reports of various Government officials prove by irrefutable figures that the present administration has saved the Government millions of dollars. That the public offices are better kept and that public work is better done is not so susceptible of mathematical demonstration; but it is a fact patent to every one acquainted with the public service. During the past two weeks over five hundren useless employes have been discharged from the Government Printing Office alone. Notwithstanding this great decrease in the force, the work of the office has not been at all impeded. The public land commissioner, General Sparks, says in his annual report. "The development of the past year under the agencies of the new administration have justified every word said in my report for last year in regard to widespread persistent land robbery. The report states that the total area over which fences have been or are to be removed either with or without resort to the courts is 2,714,926 acres, mostly in Colorado. The recommendation for an additional force of not less than one hundred special agents is renewed, as is also that in regard to adequate means for protecting the timber on the public lands. About 175,000 acres of land have been restored for public settlement; 1,485 cases, involving 225,000 acres, have been held for cancellation.

President Cleveland is more sparing than any of his predecessors were of the appropriation made by Congress for the contingent expenses of the White House. The contingent fund covers stationery, telegrams, books for library, purchase of new carpets and furniture, cost of keeping carriage and horses, etc. The appropriation for Grant's last Presidential year was only $6,000 and Grant spent every cent. Hayes, at the end of his first year in the White House, had an unexpended balance of 19 cents out of a contingent fund of $7,000. For his last year he had a contingent fund of $10,000 out of which he saved $39. Arthur managed to save only $6 86 out of the $10,000 contingent fund of his first year, and that was the largest balance he had on hand at the end of any year while he was the occupant of the White House. Mr. Cleveland saved $3,348.81 during his first year out of a contingent fund of $8,000.

Without an act of Congress the Secretary of the Navy cannot abolish a bureau or organize one. But he can distribute the work and transfer some of it from one bureau to another. One of the main features of Secretary Whitney's plan of reorganization, as submitted by him to Congress, would be a bureau of supplies, that is, a bureau which would do all the purchasing for the entire Navy Department. Another would be to amalgamate several bureaux so that every care involved in the construction of ships would be confided to a single bureau instead of being distributed over four bureaux, as at present. Instead of eight bureaux acting separately and independently, he would have four bureaux, with a central council. At present each bureau advertises separately for and separately purchases whatever it wants. Each, for instance, goes to the market separately for the coal, the ice, the timber, the stationary it wants. This plan results in unnecessary advertising and in the higher prices charged for smaller purchases. During the past year Mr. Whitney has had his own office purchase the coal, the ice, the stationery for all the bureaux with the result as an experienced official estimates, of a saving of $30,000 on these articles alone. The plan of constructing the purchasing power will be extended to other articles, and the purchasing power may be located in some one of the bureaux now existing. It is not likely that Secretary Whitney will have all the purchasing done by his office.

Business Men For Ricketts.

Colonel Robert Bruce Ricketts, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, gets a well deserved sendoff in The Lumberman, of New York a paper devoted to the interests of the trade. Here is what it says: "Colonel Ricketts' fitness for the position for which he has been named is clear as is his deserving it. He is a man of varied natural talents and of excellent business qualifications. He was a member of numerous, and President of several courts martial, which had the adjudication of important cases, during the war and has kept himself conversant with the general trend of public matters at all times. Like all true soldiers he is singularly modest, but he is a man of ideas and, when occasion calls for it, is capable of giving them vigorous expression."

Whereas, at an Orphans' Court held at Bloomsburg, in and for the county of Columbia, the twenty-seventh day of September, A. D. 1886, before the Honorable William Elwell, President, and his associates, justices of the said court, the petition of Nathan Miller, a child and heir of George Miller, late of the township of Nescopec, in the county of Luzerne, deceased was presented, setting forth that the said George Miller died intestate leaving to survive him nine children all of whom are of full age, and that their names and residences are as follows: Adam Miller Mifflin Twp., Columbia County, Pa., William Miller Wetherly, Carbon County, Pa., John Miller Nescopeck, Luzerne County, Pa. Nathan Miller Nescopeck, Luzerne County, Pa., Caroline intermarried with Jacob Saylor Wetherly, Carbon County, Pa., Polly Kishbach intermarried with John Kishbach, Mt. Pleasant Twp., Columbia County, Pa., Sallie A Whathecht Nescopeck, Luzerne county, Pa., and Maria intermarried with Levi Kishbach Nescopeck Luzerne County, Pa., and that said decedent died seized of the following land in Columbia County, Pa., bounded and described as follows to wit: situate in Beaver Twp. E. 70 P. to place of beginning containing twenty seven acres and one hundred and ten perches, about six acres cleared, balance in timber, on which is erected a frame stable. And that no partition of said land has been made.

We therefore command you that, taking with you six good and lawful men of your bailiwick, you go to and upon the premises aforesaid, and there in the presence of the parties aforesaid, by you to be warned if being warned they will be present, and having respect to the true valuation thereof, and upon the oaths and affirmations of the said six good and lawful men, you make partition to and among the heirs and legal representatives of the said intestate, in such manner, and in such proportions, as by the laws of this Commonwealth is directed, if the same can be done without prejudice to or spoiling the whole.

But if the said inquest, by you to be summoned as aforesaid to make the said partition or valuation, shall be of opinion that the premises aforesaid with the appurtenances, cannot be parted and divided among all the persons entitled thereto as required by law, without prejudice to or spoiling the whole, or that it cannot be divided into shares of equal value, then you cause the inquest to value and appraise the whole of the said real estate, or the several shares or purparts into which they may divide the said real estate, having respect to the true valuation thereof agreeably to law. And that the partition or valuation so made you distinctly and openly have before our said justices at Bloomsburg, at an Orphans' Court, there to be held on the First Monday, of December next, after such an inquest shall be made under your hand and seal, and under the hands and seals of those by whose oaths or affirmations you shall make such partition or valuation. And have you then and there this writ. Witness the Honorable William Elwell President Judge of our said court, the Eleventh day of October A. D. 1886.

WM. H. SNYDER, Clerk of O. C.

PHILADELPHIA, October 11, 1886.

Once in a while we ought to state the general fact that we have, ten times over, the largest and best collection of rich and novel dress-stuffs in town.

Once in a while we ought to state the other general fact that we sell such stuffs at fair prices at first, and put them down as the season wanes or they prove unsuccessful. They are not economical stuffs. They take no account of money. But we do not make them needlessly extravagant.

It is proper to say these things to you right here at home and to you within traveling distance of us. You have eyes to see with. This isn't the only store you shop at. What we say has double force if you find it impartial, and double force the other way if you find it empty brag.

Ten times the largest variety of rich new dress-stuffs; not needlessly extravagant.

Southwest and southeast of the center.

Think of that counter of remnants and odd-lot dress-stuffs again.

All the remnants made today, tomorrow go to the remnant counter. The quickest stuffs to go are the first to make remnants.

All the last-year's stuffs whether remnants or not are there. All the stuffs coming in for whatever reason that hinder trade at the dress-stuff counters go to the odd-lot counter.

It's a store by itself; and it makes the rest of the store a better store by drawing the line between old and new, between fashionable and going out, between what you would like if money were plenty and what you were glad to get for half or three-quarters.

By the City-hall-square door.

Blanket-time; that is, time to remind you of blanket-wisdom.

It isn't easy so close on the heels of sultry unbearable weather to be blanket-wise in a minute. Begin a little early.

This is blanket-wisdom: No matter how coarse, no matter how fine, no matter how thin, no matter how thick, no matter whether cotton or wool—but let the blanket be big.

Depends on the size of your bedstead of course. One spends a third of his time in bed unguarded. Let the blanket be big enough to lap over sides, tuck in, and be your nightly guard. There is but one virtue in blankets. That virtue is bigness.

We have blankets for wise and unwise people; more for the unwise because there are more of them. There are two sorts of blankets: big and stingy. Keep those two words in mind.

There's a little hint besides—about money. Buy by the pound.

The wisest people are apt to come first. They shall buy at present for 75 and 80c a pound and fare extremely well. The blankets we are thinking of vary in size and thickness and fineness, $3.75 to $10 a pair.

Shortly we shall have to tell of coarser and finer. We have both; $2 to $35.

Opposite the Waiting Room off the West Transept.

A needed word about Brussels and Tapestry carpets.

Brussels is Brussels and Tapestry Tapestry. We never say body Brussels for Brussels, nor Tapestry Brussels for Tapestry. That is New York.

Brussels you know all about. Tapestry you know almost nothing about, except that Roxbury Tapestry always comes first [By the way we are selling Roxbury Tapestry carpets for 75 cents a yard with plenty of latest patterns with borders to choose from—the usual price is $1—gets down sometimes to 95 or 90 cents—did you ever hear of 75 before?]

Let us say an old thread-bare thing or two for the sake of saying better a new one that ought to be known.

Tapestry carpet is an imitation of Brussels. You may or may not be able to distinguish between them when they are on the floor. You can if you happen to know the one point in which they differ, viz., sharpness, exactness, angularity of pattern. But everybody knows that the wool and colors of Brussels show through on the back; and that is the way in which you probably judge between them. You think Brussels shows its colors on the back and Tapestry doesn't. You are a year or two behind. The makers are color-printing the back of Tapestry, so that the old way of distinguishing Brussels from Tapestry is good-for-nothing.

You have got to know more of both than formerly to judge between them. We are telling this for warning. "Of course," you are thinking, "no decent merchant will tell me Tapestry is Brussels." We w'n't discuss the question who is decent and who is not; but the usual practice is to speak of Tapestry as Brussels. In New York the merchants all say "Brussels"; so do their salesmen of course; and, if asked the question squarely whether the carpet is Brussels or Tapestry, they get out of the half-told lie by saying "Tapestry Brussels"—they get out of it because they don't dare to stick to it. We maintain that the lying is done when the lie is begun.

Brussels is Brussels and Tapestry Tapestry.

The lecture of Dr. Hamlin on Friday evening was a most interesting and instructive one. The audience though not large was an intelligent one. The Eastern Question, the lecturer said, is, "Why does not Russia occupy Constantinople?" and then by the use of maps, and by clear and lucid explanations, he made the situation plain to all his hearers. In closing he said he had only begun the subject, and had only endeavored to put the question before his audience so that by reading the papers they may better understand the "Eastern Question" hereafter.

He has recently returned from a trip to Alaska. The Doctor's last parish in this country was at Grand Rapids, Michigan. During the winter he will locate in Philadelphia. Thos. Lord made an amusing porter. The quartet singing and specialties, and the P. P. Car scene by day and night were splendid features, and added realism to the performance. Luther K. Williams died at the house of Mr. Peter Billmeyer in this place on Saturday morning October 9th aged 36 years 6 months and 29 days. He was the only brother of A. J. Williams, son-in-law of Mr. Billmeyer. A few years ago Mr. Williams was a merchant in Philadelphia, but he received two attacks of apoplexy which rendered him unfit for business. For the past few years he has lived mostly with his brother, and doing what little work was possible for him to do. The funeral services were conducted Tuesday morning by Rev. Manhart, after which the body was taken to Mechanicsburg and laid to rest alongside of his father and mother. By his kind and genial disposition Luther made many friends in this place who will long remember him.

GEORGE A. CLARK, P. M.

Simon Shive offers at private sale his stock of farm implements, consisting of mowers, reapers, binders, drills, harrows, farm wagons &c. Also several full blooded Jersey cows.

The case of A. E. Cadow vs. the D. L. & W. R. R. Co. was tried in court last week Thursday and Friday. It was a suit brought to recover damages for an accident at the East street crossing in Bloomsburg. On the morning of January 28th 1884 Cadow started from his home on Seventh street to go to Lockard's shops where he was employed as fireman, and where he had worked for several years. When he got within a few feet of the track he left the sidewalk to go diagonally across the street to the shops, and as it was dark, and he was in a hurry, and was crippled in his right leg he missed the planking in the middle of the street, and stubbing his toe on one of the rails he fell and broke the crippled leg near where it had been broken before. He then sued the company for $5,000 damages for negligence in not planking between the rails clear across the street. When the plaintiff's evidence closed, defendant's counsel moved for a compulsory nonsuit on the ground that the plaintiff's case disclosed contributory negligence on his part. A half day was occupied in the argument, Geo. E. Elwell and Col. Freeze being for the defendant, and William Chrisman and Ikeler & Herring for the plaintiff. The court directed a nonsuit to be entered, and a rule was taken by the plaintiff to show cause why the nonsuit should not be taken off. It will be argued next month.

Dedication.

The Orangeville Presbyterian church was dedicated Saturday last October 9th. After the usual introductory services the Rev. Dr. Webster of Williamsport made a brief address, congratulating the people on having completed one of the finest and most commodious church buildings in this section. He recounted the usual hindrances in the building of churches and urged the people to liberality, asking for subscriptions. Although the attendance was not large they soon pledged $1,000 sufficient to dedicate the house free of debt. The church cost complete, including furniture and carpet, $5,000. The windows are of stained glass, and all memorial. Two very pretty windows in the gable end have been placed in honor of the first and last pastors—Rev. D. J. Waller, Sr. and Rev. C. K. Caufield. The seating is neat and comfortable. The auditorium is seated with 225 assembly chairs, with folding seat. The Sunday School room is immediately in front of the pulpit and separated from auditorium by pivoted windows which makes a fine addition to the large room when needed. The dedication sermon was preached in the afternoon by the Rev. D. J. Waller, Sr., who nearly 50 years ago began missionary operations in this region. Rev. Dr. Mitchell preached in the evening, also Rev. Prof. Waller, who was a pastor of the congregation for two years. The communion was celebrated by a large and interesting audience. The people are to be congratulated on receiving so good a house of worship. A large Sunday School was organized with good prospects of doing much good.

Senatorial Conference.

The Democratic conference of the twenty fourth Senatorial district convened at the Exchange Hotel on Thursday evening, the 7th inst, at 7.30 o'clock. An organization was effected by the election of C. B. Jackson Esq. as chairman, M. J. Phillips secretary and R. K. Reeder assistant. The conferees were C. B. Jackson and C. G. Barkley of Columbia, Seth Foresman and R. K. Reeder of Lycoming, M. J. Phillips and Patrick Connor of Sullivan, J. W. Sheriff and J. S. McBride of Montour. The candidates were Col. J. G. Freeze of Columbia, V. E. Metzgar of Lycoming, James McCormick of Montour and B. S. Collins of Sullivan. Messrs. McCormick and Collins have both represented their counties in the lower branch of the Legislature. Mr. Metzgar is the youngest of the candidates, being only 27.

At the first session 16 ballots were taken, each delegate voting constantly for its own candidate. After a recess of a half hour another session was held and 17 more ballots taken with the same result. The conference then adjourned until 7 o'clock Friday evening, and after 47 more ballots making the total number 80, an adjournment was made to Wednesday evening, the 13th, at Williamsport. Each delegation seems bent upon the selection of its candidate, and it is impossible to predict who may be selected.

The Fair.

Wednesday, the opening day of the fair showed that this year will be a greater success than any previous ones. Last year there were 4,000 entries but this will exceed it by a vast number. The mammoth exhibition building will be filled with choice articles of exhibit, which can be tastefully arranged. All the old sheds have been torn away to give space for this one building which is so large that all the old sheds could be put inside of it and yet leave much space for exhibits. If we are favored with fine weather the attendance will be unusually large, judging from the great number of entries.

There are 40 horses entered for the races some of which have a record of 2:19.

BENTON FAIR.

The third meeting of the Benton Agricultural Society, from the 6th to the 9th instant, was a grand financial success. It will not only pay all its premiums and expenses in full, but will be enabled to pay its stockholders a dividend. They should feel proud of this. For the first time in its history it was favored with desirable weather during the entire time of meeting. We saw decided improvements in the Fair of this year over previous years and with a railroad to Benton, their future meetings will compare favorably with other Fairs in the State. The exhibits were larger and some of them better than formerly. The display of agricultural products depends upon the condition of the crops. This was a very unfavorable year for some of the crops in the northern part of the county. The apple crop, which seldom fails there, is an inferior crop this year and the display of apples at the Fair showed it. The display of potatoes was very small and so was the crop. Squashes, beets, rutabagas, carrots, onions, tomatoes, were as large and fine as at any Fair. The ears of corn, the specimens of wheat, rye, oats, buckwheat, barley, could not be excelled. A full line of mill products was exhibited by G. W. Cole, of Rhorsburg. The honey crop was never larger than this year and such large displays were never before seen at a Fair in the county. The largest exhibitors were Daniel Fritz and Josiah Coleman. The praises of the women in the northern part of the county have been so often sounded that it is only necessary to say that their display did them credit. The bread and cakes and pies cannot be excelled. The pies alone occupied as much space as all other baked goods. There was scores of them. The wines, preserves, jellies, spiced, pickled and canned fruits were almost too tempting to resist. Here where you never hear the expression, "good butter," for all butter is good, the most beautiful rolls were shown.

The fancy work compared very favorable with that seen at larger Fairs. In quilts and cushions the crazy patch prevailed. Specimens of embroidery and handsome lace were numerous. Fine work on ladies undergarments showed how skillful the ladies in that part of the county are with the needle. The work in wool, hair and artificial flowers were very fine. The display of millinery goods, hats and bonnets trimmed in ribbons and feathers and birds, was very creditable.

The exhibition of live stock was an improvement over last year. The Holstein bull of John J. Karns attracted a good bit of attention on account of his immense size. He weighs 2040 pounds. There were a number of Alderney and Shorthorn cattle; besides Devons, Guernseys and native stock. The horse show was very fine. The handsomest horses, mares, colts and driving horses were to be found among the exhibit. The farmers are selecting the mates with greater care and the colts show off better. Sheep and swine were not very numerous and they did not show much care in breeding. The poultry display was the smallest of all. All the fancy breeds were, however, represented.

Benton is too far from the railroad to have a large display of agricultural implements. There was only one mowing machine, the Champion, one broadcast seeder, one feed cutter, splitter and crusher.

There was a goodly number of wagons exhibited. The Appleman Bros., of Benton, had several of their celebrated farm wagons, a platform spring wagon, with a greatly improved platform, and several skeleton wagons. John Eves had two of his well known Millville farm wagons. J. R. Rice had a fine skeleton wagon and A. A. Hopp and W. B. Snodgrass, both of Mifflinburg, had each several very handsome buggies.

Keller Bros. had a full line of Danville stoves, a great variety of tinware, a number of very pretty library lamps and the Western Washer.

H Hulme represented the Vermont Farm Machine Co., with churns, butter workers, and butter printers.

Jerry Saltzer had a number of very fine Miller organs, two celebrated Estey organs, White, Domestic, Davis Vertical Feed and Royal St John Rotary Sewing Machines. The last named is pronounced the best rotary machine in the world. Jerry's stall was crowded all the time, listening to the excellent music, rendered by Richard Methereil and B. F. Spotts assisted by Charles McHenry.

S. D. Neyhard exhibited the New Wheeler No. 8 and a great variety of tinsel work writing and embroidering done on this machine. This stall was surrounded by crowds watching this machine turn out work.

There were more shows and fakirs at this than at any previous meeting of the Benton association. There were four tents. In the one was exhibited the tall Congo Indian, a pair of pythons, a Punch & Judy show and a man swallowing an 18-inch sword. Another has the largest hog on earth; another the 5 legged calf and the fourth is a variety show consisting of songs, dances, farces, &c.

The races were unusually interesting. The horses were more evenly matched and the races better contested than at any previous fair.

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practising physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief,

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It effected a speedy cure.—G. Stoveall, M. D., Carrollton, Miss.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases. —M. A. Rust, M. D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe Cold, which grew worse and settled on my Lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My Cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Saulsburgh, Penn.

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine, and was cured. —Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind.

"For economy and comfort, we use Hood's Sarsaparilla," writes an intelligent Buffalo, N. Y., lady. 100 doses one dollar.

TO PRESERVE NATURAL FLOWERS.—Dip the flowers in melted paraffine, withdrawing them quickly. The liquid should be only just hot enough to maintain its fluidity and the flowers should be dipped one at a time, held by the stocks and moved about for an instant to get rid of air bubbles. Fresh cut flowers, free from moisture, make excellent specimens in this way. If you would preserve your health and invigorate your entire system use Perrine's Pure Barley Malt Whiskey. For sale by druggists and all dealers. [eow.

SLEEPLESSNESS.—Narcotics and sedatives murder sleep; the unnatural stupor is soon followed by ill effects. Simmons Liver Regulator removes the cause of restlessness and sleeplessness by regulating the bowels, by establishing good digestion and by quieting the nerves.

"I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and loss of sleep. As soon as I feel the least nervous I take a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator, and sleep all night."

MRS. R. BRYANT, Griswoldsville, Ga.

Every wife and mother in the country should know the great value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as a blood purifier. It gives tone, health and strength, to the vital organs, corrects all irregularities, and expels impurities from the system. Young and old use it. Price $1.

The Old Way and the New.

THE OLD WAY—Rock the baby in a sap-trough, carry it to town in a potato basket, give it salts and senna for a physic, wash it with soft soap and water; when sick dose it to death with harsh medicines, and then say: "The Lord claimed it." THE NEW WAY—Use Dr. Hand's Remedies for Children, which have been tested in his practice for 15 years. They are pure, safe, and a God-send to parents and children. Dr. Hand's remedies are: Teething Lotion, a wonderfully soothing and harmless lotion to bathe the gums of teething babes. Colic Cure, promptly relieves colic and soothes cross babes without stupefying them. Pleasant Physic, for children and adults, cures constipation. Worm Elixir, which is combined with a purge. Cough and Croup Medicine, has no superior in its line. Diarrhœa Mixture, cures when everything else fails. General Tonic, gives tone and appetite to weakly children. D. LANCELL'S ASTHMA AND CATARRH REMEDY.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Having struggled 20 years between life and death with ASTHMA or PHTHISIC, treated by noted physicians, and receiving no benefit, I was compelled during the last 5 years of my illness to sit on my chair day and night gasping for breath. My sufferings were beyond description. In despair I experimented on myself by compounding roots and herbs and inhaling the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered this WONDERFUL CURE FOR ASTHMA AND CATARRH, warranted to relieve the most stubborn case of ASTHMA IN FIVE MINUTES, so that the patient can lie down to rest and sleep comfortably. Please read the following condensed extracts from unsolicited testimonials, all of recent date:

Oliver V. R. Holmes, San Jose, Cal., writes: "I find the remedy all and even more than represented. It gave me instantaneous relief."

E. M. Carson, A. M., Warren, Kansas, writes: "Was treated by eminent physicians of this country and Germany; tried the climate of different states—nothing afforded relief like your preparation."

T. E. Gates, County Treasurer, Philadelphia, Miss., writes: "Have used the Remedy. Would not live without it. Every one that uses it recommends it."

L. B. Phelps, P. M., Griggs, Ohio, writes: "Suffered with asthma 40 years. Your medicine in 3 minutes does more for me than the most eminent physician did for me in three years."

H. C. Plumpton, Joliet, Ill., writes: "Send Catarrh Remedy at once. Cannot get along without it. I find it to be the most valuable medicine I have ever tried."
